Title: Paper Bag Making Workshop (Plastic bag eradication)

2022-23

Report

Department of Chemistry organized one day workshop on “Newspaper Bag Making Workshop” In order to remove Plastic bags uses. Program was chaired by Head of the department Dr. R. M. Jumle, Dr. S. V. Kolhe is present as a Chief Guest.

Introduction

Paper bags have become increasingly popular as an eco-friendly alternative to plastic bags due to their biodegradability and minimal environmental impact. This report aims to provide an overview of the paper bag making process, the materials involved, and its environmental benefits.

Materials Used

The primary material for paper bag making is paper, typically sourced from sustainable forests or recycled paper. The choice of paper weight and quality depends on the intended use of the bag. In addition to paper, adhesive and ink may be used for bonding and printing on the bags.

Paper Bag Making Process

Paper bag making involves several key steps:

- a. Paper Cutting: Large rolls of paper are cut into sheets of the desired size. The size and shape vary according to the bag's specifications.
- b. Printing: If branding or information is required on the bag, it undergoes a printing process. Commonly used inks are water-based and eco-friendly.
- c. Handle Attachment: Handles can be made of paper or fabric and are attached to the bag. The method of attachment can vary, including gluing or stitching.
- d. Folding: The paper sheets are folded to create the bag's shape. The exact folding pattern depends on the bag's design.
- e. Gluing: Adhesive is applied to specific areas of the paper, which are then folded and pressed together to form the bag's body.
- f. Quality Control: Each bag is inspected for defects to ensure it meets quality standards.

Environmental Benefits

Paper bag making offers several environmental benefits:

- a. Biodegradability: Paper bags decompose naturally, minimizing long-term environmental impact.
- b. Reduced Waste: Paper bags can be easily recycled or composted, reducing waste in landfills.
- c. Renewable Resources: Paper is derived from trees, which can be sustainably managed through responsible forestry practices.
- d. Non-Toxic: Inks and adhesives used in paper bag production are typically non-toxic and safe for the environment.

Market Demand

The demand for paper bags has increased due to growing environmental awareness and regulations limiting plastic bag use. Many businesses are adopting paper bags to cater to eco-conscious consumers.

Conclusion

Paper bag making is a sustainable and environmentally friendly industry that plays a significant role in reducing plastic pollution and promoting responsible resource management. With increasing awareness of the environmental impact of plastic, the future of paper bag production appears promising. Businesses and consumers are encouraged to support this eco-friendly alternative for packaging and carrying items.

Green Project Report

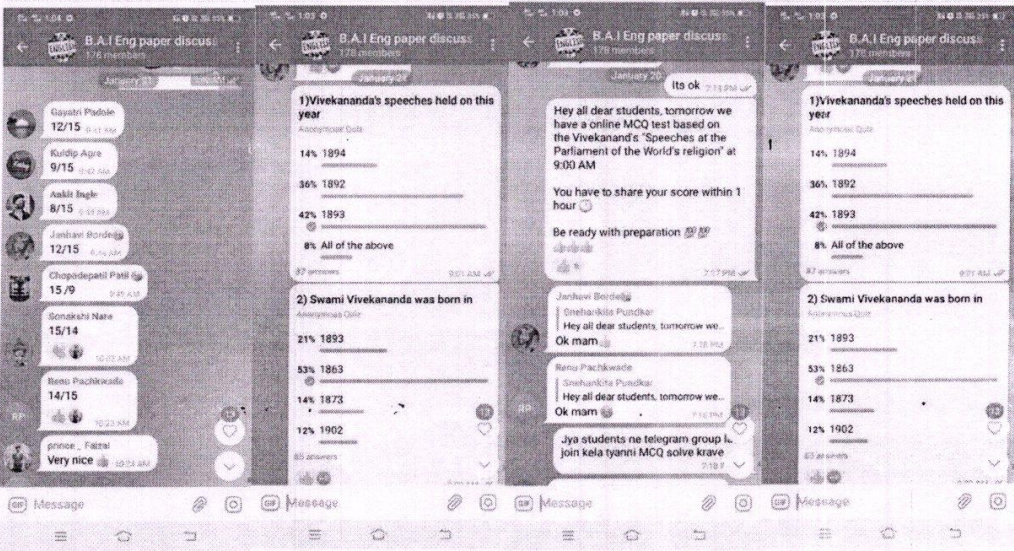

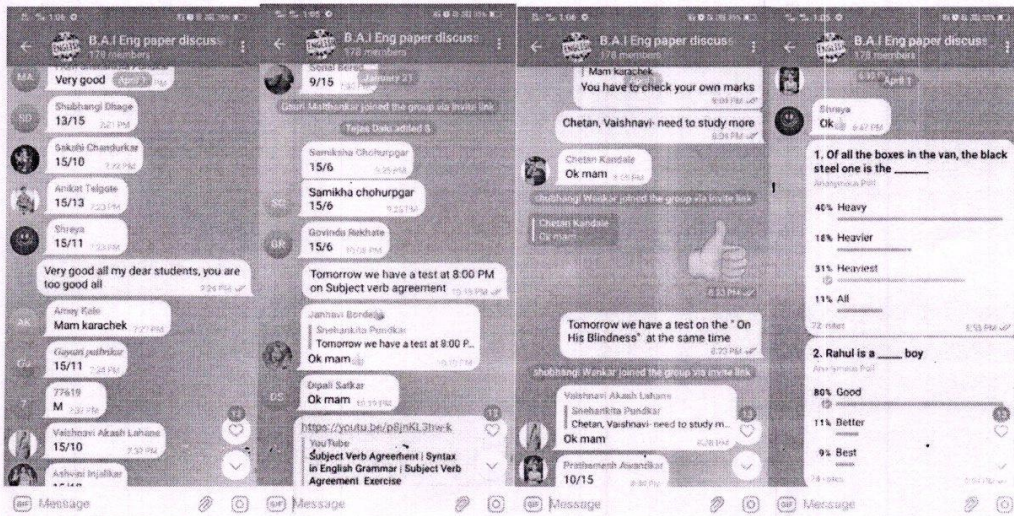

In this academic session, Department of English has tried to go paperless at certain levels to reduce the use of paper. This initiative has impacted positively as the reduced use of paper helped the central initiative of 'Go Green' undertaken by the Government of India. In this 'Green Project Initiative,' we took the unit tests of students in online mode on the telegram platform. Apart from the test, we circulated some online notes, study materials, e-contents, movie links and PDFs to students. We also circulated the notices in online mode on WhatsApp groups and Telegram platform, which saved both papers and time.
